SECTION ONE: LIBERAL/LIBERAL DEMOCRAT CANDIDATES 1945-2019

SECTION TWO: SDP CANDIDATES in the GENERAL ELECTIONS of 1983 and 1987

PREFACE

The compilation of this Index has been complicated by name changes of many constituencies over the years. Forty or more of the candidates listed have fought constituencies in up to five regions of the United Kingdom. Unlike industrialised regions, there have been no pockets of constituencies which the party failed to contest over the period 1945-64. Individual constituencies, however, were neglected for many years, particularly those with a history of Liberal National allegiance from the early 1930s. As the Nat-Lib-Con presence withered away after 1959, the resurgent Liberal Party began to contest these constituencies once more. There are few larger-than-life individuals among the individuals listed below, though many candidates have interesting backgrounds. Research will continue with respect to several thinly documented entries.

Following agreement with the Green Party, the Liberal Democrats did not nominate a candidate at Bury St Edmunds at the General Election of 2019. The party also stood down in the constituency of Luton South in favour of the retiring MP, who was standing as anti-Brexit candidate.

THE MARTELL PLAN

The Martell Plan was an electoral strategy adopted by the Liberal Party for the General Election of 1950. It bears the name of Edward Martell qv (Greater London), a party 'grandee' of the immediate post-war years who advocated the nomination of over 150 additional candidates in constituencies which had little or no Liberal organization nor history of Liberal activity in recent years. Most were adopted only days before nominations closed, many at the eleventh hour. Martell's objective was to increase the Liberal challenge to a level at which the party would be enabled to form a government, presuming enough MPs were elected. His supporters, among them many younger party members including Jeremy Thorpe and Isaac Hyam qqv, believed that a steadily growing number of adoptions being announced in the media would create a momentum of its own in the minds of the electorate. Most of the constituencies involved were in urban areas of Greater London, the North West, South East, Scotland and the West Midland Region, though other regions were involved to lesser degree.

The final national tally of candidates, a fair proportion of them of dubious Liberal pedigree, was over 450. The party lost over 300 deposits, though without contemporary records of local Liberal Associations, or regional parties, covering the period, it is now impossible to differentiate technically between a 'Martell Plan Candidate' and a candidate, albeit in an unpromising constituency, adopted following more formal procedures, well in advance of nomination day. A large percentage of the Martell Plan candidates were among those to lose their deposits of £150, then set at 12 1/2% of votes cast. Wisely provision had been made for some measure of insurance cover against this contingency with Lloyds in the City of London.

The goal of fighting every mainland constituency in the UK was finally achieved 25 years later under the leadership of Jeremy Thorpe at the General Election of October 1974. The broad front was reduced, marginally, at the following election of 1979. In both 1983 and 1987 the Liberals and their allies, the SDP, each contested roughly 50% of the UK parliamentary constituencies, avoiding contests against each other save in a handful of cases. Since 1992 the Liberal Democrats have contested every constituency in mainland UK, save for that held by The Speaker and a handful of other instances, at every successive general election. In recent times party nominees who are nominated at the last minute in unpromising constituencies, simply to show the flag, have come to be termed 'paper candidates.' Virtually every candidate at recent general elections, however, has been approved by the party's parliamentary candidates' committee and adopted according to formal procedure.

The scale of defeat for the Liberal Party in the 1950 General Election, in which nine Liberal MPs were elected, was eclipsed by the debacle of 2015 when only eight of the previously held 57 constituencies returned a Liberal Democrat MP. No less than 340 of 631 deposits were forfeited, £170,000, at the current rate of £500, with the threshold at 5% of votes cast. No deposits had been lost by the party at the General Election of 2010. The party went on to lose 375 deposits at the General Election of 2017, totaling £187,500, again contesting virtually every constituency on the UK mainland. 136 deposits were forfeit at the General Election of 2019, amounting to £68,000.

His rich Hampshire voice on the air was an instantly recognisable feature of the English summer. A man of deep humanity with a strong sympathy with the under-dog, he was bitterly opposed to apartheid in South Africa which he experienced at first hand. When asked to state his race on an immigration form at a South African airport, he wrote 'human' against the question and was then asked by an aggressive official to explain the meaning of his answer!

He became well-known from his regular appearances on BBC Radio Any Questions? from the mid-1950s where he boldly stated the case for Liberalism at a time when the party had few capable media spokespersons. A gifted, if somewhat emotional debater, he was a figure of stature in the Liberal revival at that time. A talented writer with a highly personal style, he was the author of a number of definitive books on cricket, incl histories, reminiscences of the game, portraits of players etc many of which have become classics. He also wrote on food, wine, the country, also publishing poetry of some merit. Of a deeply emotional character, his private life was marred by tragedy. He was not without bitter critics and enemies both inside cricket and the BBC on account of his forthright radical views. He retired to Alderney, Channel Islands and died there in 1991. Epping 1955, 1959
