SDP CANDIDATES in the GENERAL ELECTIONS of 1983 and 1987

FOREWORD

By

Michael Meadowcroft

There is no way of interpreting the twists and turns enacted by today's politicians without recourse to political history. All too often it is apparent that today's politicians have themselves but a passing acquaintance with their own history. Those of us who are aware of the importance of history and the lessons to be drawn from it, can only expect colleagues to be influenced by our experience if we can rely on the facts. Our personal libraries no doubt contain a myriad of volumes setting out electoral and parliamentary facts, figures and names but hitherto there has been no publication with a comprehensive biographical record of every Liberal and Liberal Democrat candidate in the UK since 1945. Now we have such a record painstakingly compiled by Lionel King - himself a candidate at the 1964, 1970 and 1987 General Elections. I know that it will be kept close at hand to facilitate my future work and I commend it to colleagues.

PREFACE

A number of difficulties have been encountered in compiling this Index which have not been resolved in an entirely satisfactory manner. Local government boundary changes in the early 1970s led to the creation of the Cleveland and Humberside Counties. Cleveland and adjacent constituencies have been included in the Index for the North East Region. Humberside constituencies commencing with the General Election of February 1974 are included in the Yorkshire Region.

The region has been home to an impressive gallery of party personalities, several of whom receive extended entries. The spirited independence with respect to LPO HQ in London which the Yorkshire Regional Party has often demonstrated, and the relatively strong direction it has exerted over its constituency associations, would account for the formidable challenge maintained in the Region at successive general elections, even in the direst years of party fortunes. Yorkshire appears to have been rather less willing in 1950 to heed to the dictates of the Martell Plan (see article below) than other regions. Even so, until the 1970s there were several Labour-held mining and industrial constituencies where the Party always declined to fight. Information on many candidates remains sparse. SDP candidates particularly, over 1983-87, seem to have been an anonymous battalion indeed, few if any of them leaving a mark on any field of human endeavour.

The Lib Dems did not contest the constituency of Skipton & Ripon at the General Election of 2017 by semi-official agreement with the Green Party. No candidate was nominated for the by-election at Haltemprice in 2008, the sitting member having resigned over a matter of principle, with which the Lib Dems were in agreement. In common with other parties, the by-election at Batley & Spen in 2016 was not fought out of respect for the previous Labour incumbent who had died tragically at the hands of a racist murderer.

THE MARTELL PLAN

The Martell Plan, mentioned in passing throughout the regional directories was the electoral strategy adopted by the Liberal Party for the General Election of 1950. It was first named after Edward Martell qv (Greater London), a party 'grandee' of the immediate post-war years who advocated the nomination of over 150 additional candidates in constituencies which had little or no Liberal organization nor history of Liberal activity in recent years. Most were adopted less than two months before nomination day, many at the eleventh hour, Martell's objective being to increase the Liberal challenge to a level at which the party would be enabled to form a government, presuming enough MPs were elected.

Martell and his supporters, among them many younger party members including Jeremy Thorpe, Isaac Hyam qqv, believed that a steadily growing number of adoptions being announced in the media would create a momentum of its own in the minds of the electorate. The majority of the constituencies involved were in urban areas of Greater London, the North West, South East, Scotland and the West Midland Regions, though other regions were involved to lesser degree. Quixotically, a considerable number of largely rural constituencies went uncontested where a Liberal candidate might have fared reasonably well, judging upon results obtained at the 1945 General Election. The final national tally of candidates, a fair proportion of them of dubious Liberal pedigree, was over 450. The party lost over 300 deposits, though without contemporary records of Liberal associations, or regional parties, covering the period, it is now impossible to differentiate technically between a 'Martell Plan Candidate' and a candidate, albeit in an unpromising constituency, adopted following more formal procedures, well in advance of nomination day. An enormous percentage of the Martell Plan candidates were among those to lose their deposits of £150, then set at 12 1/2% of votes cast. Fortunately provision had been made for some measure of insurance cover with Lloyds in the City of London against this contingency.

The goal of fighting every mainland constituency in the UK was finally achieved 25 years later under the leadership of Jeremy Thorpe at the General Election of October 1974. The broad front was reduced, marginally, at the following election of 1979. In both 1983 and 1987 the Liberals and their allies, the SDP, each contested roughly 50% of the UK parliamentary constituencies, avoiding contests against each other save in a handful of cases. Since 1992 the Liberal Democrats have contested every constituency in mainland UK, save for that held by The Speaker and a handful of other instances, at every successive general election. In recent times party nominees who are nominated at the last minute in unpromising constituencies, simply to show the flag, have come to be termed 'paper candidates.' Virtually every candidate at recent general elections, however, has been approved by the party's parliamentary candidates' committee and adopted according to formal procedure.

The scale of defeat for the Liberal Party in the 1950 General Election, in which nine Liberal MPs were elected, was eclipsed by the debacle of 2015 when only eight of the previously held 57 constituencies returned a Liberal Democrat MP. No less than 340 of 631 deposits were forfeited, £170,000, at the current rate of £500, with the threshold at 5% of votes cast. No deposits had been lost by the party at the General Election of 2010. The party went on to lose 375 deposits at the General Election of 2017, totaling £187,500, again contesting virtually every constituency on the UK mainland.

CLEGG, Rt Hon Sir Nicholas William Peter (Nick) was born Chalfont St Giles, Buckinghamshire 1967, his mother Dutch and grandparents of international descent including Russian. He attended Caldicott School, Farnham Royal, later Westminster School, then Cambridge U, U of Minnesota, the College of Europe at Bruges. He joined the party in 1993, worked for the Euro Commission and about this time was first noted as a possible rising star by Paddy Ashdown. He was elected an MEP for the East Midlands, serving 1999-2004. He was Trade spokesman in the European Parliament. He began publishing pamphlets, writing articles for journals and was later a contributor to the controversial Orange Book in which he advocated market liberal solutions to economic problems. His book The Liberal Moment was published in 2009.

Clegg's family background would account for his facility with languages. He lives with his family at Putney. His Spanish-born wife, Miriam Gonzalez Durantez, is a partner in a highly successful international legal practice. While at Strasbourg he campaigned for the reform of European institutions, and more transparency in administration. He meanwhile joined the Parliamentary lobbying firm Gplus. After only two years at Westminster he was elected to the party leadership in November 2007 at an inauspicious time as the party's third leader in two years. He maintained that his own and his party's orientation was to be 'radical centrist.' His first two years as leader were difficult for him and the party. He was soon branded 'calamity Clegg' by the hostile right-wing press. His standing was to be greatly enhanced overnight, however, for his masterly showing in the innovative TV debates featuring the three party leaders, in the closing weeks of the General Election campaign of 2010. He put over party policy effectively and countered opponents' attacks with great skill, showing himself as sincere, unassuming and convincing. Overnight he had transformed himself into a figure of national prominence. His overall performance put new heart into party campaigning at constituency level, candidates everywhere noting on the doorstep voters' positive impressions of Clegg and the party.

The result of the subsequent 2010 General Election however was an enormous disappointment. Some critics within the party claimed his general style of leadership was partly to blame. Support in terms of votes was up a paltry 1% and a net five seats were lost. The Conservatives, with most seats, immediately made overtures on the possibility of forming a coalition government. The arithmetic was not quite right for a deal with Labour but after some delay, an agreement was reached with the Conservatives after intensive negotiations to form a coalition government. The background to these events is covered in 22 Days In May (pub 2010) by David Laws qv (Southwest Region) and Five days to Power (pub 2010) by Rob Wilson. Clegg became Deputy Prime Minister, Lord President of the Council, Minister responsible for overseeing Constitutional and Political Reform. There were immediate defections of dissidents over his decision to take the party into coalition with the Conservatives. The flag ship policy to abolish Student Fees had to be abandoned abruptly leading to public opprobrium particularly among the young. The referendum on PR, a precondition of the party joining the coalition, resulted in an overwhelming defeat on a further key plank of policy. Early on it was suggested Clegg should resign as party leader while remaining deputy Prime Minister.

Clegg made a fighting speech to the Liberal Assembly in Birmingham in Sept 2011 in which he restated the party's role in the coalition, maintaining that coalition governments would be the future pattern of politics in Britain. Setbacks continued to occur; a close colleague, David Laws qv (Southwest Region) was obliged to resign from the government after just two weeks in office over expenses irregularities. Party support fell alarmingly in by-elections and municipal elections, though Eastleigh was narrowly retained in 2013, in the wake of the Chris Huhne qv (South Central Region) scandal. Perhaps the most depressing feature of this period was the sight of Clegg sitting with a glum expression on the Government front bench, often beside Prime Minister Cameron as the unpopular austerity programme unfolded.

As 2014 opened, Clegg was faced with the embarrassment of the accusations of sexual harassment of HQ employees, made against Lord Rennard, former Head of LPO. The downward trend in local government elections continued in May 2014, Liberal Democrat representation on municipal councils being decimated throughout Britain. Gains made over the previous twenty years were wiped away, including those in Liverpool, Birmingham and other areas where the Lib Dems had been challenging Labour. Representation in the European parliament was likewise reduced from nine MEPs to one.

Clegg's position as leader of a minor party in a coalition would have been extremely difficult at any time and particularly so in a grave economic crisis. This is totally overlooked by many within the party. In the media he was portrayed almost universally as a shield for the Prime Minister and an unconvincing and hesitant apologist for government policies with which in any case he was out of sympathy. For an agonisingly prolonged period leading up to the 2015 General Election campaign, he was universally reviled in the media and few colleagues or local constituency parties still considered him a positive campaign asset. Local party election leaflets generally omitted mention of him.

The debt the nation and the party owe Nick Clegg, however, is considerable though it will be many years before it is fully appreciated. Immediately after the rout in May 2015, Clegg intimated that he would resign the leadership, as soon as his successor had been elected by a poll of the party membership. He attributed the result of the General Election to 'grievance and fear' on the part of the electorate. He gave an inspired and well received speech to Bournemouth Assembly in Sept 2015. His memoir Between the Extremes (Bodley Head) 2016, was dismissed as 'banal' by critics within the party. He lost his parliamentary seat in the pro-Labour swing 1917 to a bizarre opponent,

Jared O'Mara, who was almost immediately to have the Labour Whip withdrawn. He received a knighthood in New Year Honours List 2018 and now holds a senior post with the Facebook organisation. Though rarely spoken of these days, it is unlikely that a figure of his standing will remain off the political scene for long; Sheffield, Hallam 2005, 2010, 2015, 2017; MP 2005-2017
