Constituencies in the counties of Kent, Surrey, East Sussex and West Sussex

SECTION ONE: LIBERAL AND LIBERAL DEMOCRAT CANDIDATES 1945-2024

SECTION TWO: SDP CANDIDATES in the GENERAL ELECTIONS of 1983 and 1987

PREFACE

Compiling this Index has presented fewer problems than those for most other regions. Many candidates have contested single constituencies at three or more general elections and/or intervening by-elections. There was a barren period in the 1950s, the Party then being at the lowest ebb of its fortunes, when not a single constituency was contested in the county of Kent for eight years. In the South East region the main contenders and holders of most of the parliamentary constituencies have been traditionally the Conservatives. But unlike heavily industrialised regions of the Midlands, the North and Scotland, where the majority of the seats have been traditionally Labour-held, there are no vast swathes of unpromising constituencies with no tradition of Liberal activity. While Conservative strongholds still abound, Liberal/Liberal Democrat candidates almost everywhere throughout the South East region have been assured, 2015/17 excepted, both of a respectable percentage poll and the probability of an encouraging second place.

Spelthorne appears to have been located traditionally within the boundaries of the former county of Middlesex until the creation of Greater London and attendant major changes in historical county boundaries. It has since been included within the county of Surrey. For the purposes of this index therefore, Spelthorne constituency has been included in the South East Region.

Many candidates listed in this Index have contested constituencies elsewhere, a figure proportionately higher than for any other region. Several have fought constituencies in three or four regions which has involved much cross-checking. Several prominent party figures have been associated with the South East though the region has been notably less well-endowed than others with colourful characters and eccentrics.

By prior agreement, the Liberal Democrats did not nominate a candidate to oppose the Green Party candidate, Caroline Lucas, at Brighton, Pavilion at the General Elections of 2017 and 2019.

THE MARTELL PLAN

The Martell Plan, mentioned in passing throughout the regional directories was an electoral strategy adopted by the Liberal Party for the General Election of 1950. It was named after Edward Martell qv (Greater London), a party 'grandee' of the immediate post-war years who advocated the nomination of over 150 additional candidates in constituencies which had little or no Liberal organization nor history of Liberal activity in recent years. Most were adopted only days before nominations closed, many at the eleventh hour. Martell's objective was to increase the Liberal challenge to a level at which the Party would be enabled to form a government, presuming enough MPs were elected. His supporters, among them enthusiastic younger Party members including Jeremy Thorpe, Isaac Hyam qqv, believed that a steadily growing number of adoptions being announced in the media would create a momentum of its own in the minds of the electorate.

The goal of fighting every mainland constituency in the UK was finally achieved appropriately under the leadership of Jeremy Thorpe at the General Election of October 1974. The broad front was reduced, marginally, at the following election of 1979. In both 1983 and 1987 the Liberals and their allies, the SDP, each contested roughly 50% of the UK parliamentary constituencies, avoiding contests against each other save in a handful of cases. Since 1992 the Liberal Democrats have contested every constituency in mainland UK, save for that held by The Speaker and a handful of other instances, at every successive general election. In recent times Party nominees who are nominated at the last minute in unpromising constituencies, simply to show the flag, have come to be termed 'paper candidates.' Virtually every candidate at recent general elections, however, has been approved by the Party's Parliamentary Candidates' Committee and adopted according to formal procedure.
